Main Idea

Protagonist lives in a small town out on the middle nowhere, working as a gas station cashier. Recently, Protagonist has been relocated to a gas station far out in the desert. That was when he hears on the news about a meteor impact a few miles off from work. The next few days were business as usual, however he can rarely see a car passes the station. Soon the colour starts to fade away from Protagonists eyes. Eventually, the government supported third party facility catches wind of Protagonist condition, and locks him up in a facility close to the crash site for experimentation. In a seemingly hopeless situation, Protagonists start to see creatures that no one else can see. Three of those creature come up to him, and offer him a chance to escape. They seem trustworthy enough, but who knows what these creatures are planning to do with Protagonist.

Soon the facility agents observe the protagonist's strange action, scientists in the facility found that maybe the protagonist is the one they are looking for, the one who successfully communicates with creatures from another dimension. With this brand new knowledge, the facility is now prepared to contain Protagonist, learn about these creatures, and maybe control them for their own purposes.

(Consider give the government some power above these things, if they know nothing about those creatures before, the protagonist can easily cooperate with the creatures and fool them and escape. The government guys are doing something bad for sure, so they must knew something about these creatures already and knew certain ways to constrain them, they must hold something in hand(to threaten the protagonist,or something else))

The Setting

A government supported third party facility just near the meteor impact site. This facility was setup to monitor and research the meteor and any anomalies surrounding it

//Protagonist captured by government for entering a banned zone.//

//Protagonist escapes and returns home//

Days later, colour start to fade out until he can only see black and white. Later still, strange creature start appearing that only he can see.

These creatures have a small amount of influence on the human world? (EX. creatures pushing humans into streets to cause accidents)

These creatures are what we would assume to be just luck. Some can cause bad luck, and some can cause good luck.

Creatures are parasites that cause good luck or bad luck or other strange encounters. Creature have different intelligence levels.

Two possibilities for story

Government might know about the creatures and are investigating/experimenting.

//Government doesn't know about the creatures.//
